In the opinion of the Students' Council the granting of the request of the Royal Victoria College Underraduates' Society for membership in he Students' Society is not feasible. At least, this was the spirit of a resolution passed at the regular weekly meeting of the Council held in the Union last night. It was moved and seconded "that whereas the granting of the request of the Royal Victoria College Undergraduate Society to be admitted to membership in the Students' Society would involve a radical change in the constitution of the Society, and will direct the attention of the Students' Society to a far different field of action than the one it was primarily and especially formed or, and would result in complicating he administration of student affairs without appreciably extending the number of affairs actually controlled by the Council.

"And whereas the only instance in which such a membership in the Students' Society would affect any cooperation at all would be the editoral policy of the Daily.

the matter of the suggested incorporait would be unwise to commit the Society to such a condition as might prove an inconvenience after the war. As it is now, the Students' Society has no legal status, it not being incorporated or even registered. An advantage to be gained under incorporation would be the securing of a limited Nability, but it is unlikely that the Students' Society would wish to avail themselves of this privilege since it would be anxious to pay any debt which might be incurred, and not resort to limited liability. Another advantage would be the power to hold property in the Society's own right. Mr. Common stated that he had never heard of a Students' Society which possesses this power, and in his opinion the system now in operation would be preferable. The securing of incorporation would involve a certain amount of expense, and also the se curing of the consent of the govern ing body of the University. #### THE FLEETING HOUR.

It would be somewhat interesting, and, we believe, surprising, if some enterprising person were to busy himself with studying the average day spent by a college student, and discovering the exact amount of time needlessly wasted. By "wasted time" we do not mean the time spent in amusement and necessary relaxation, but that frittered away between lectures, before and after meals, and so on.

Most students arrive at their respective buildings barely in time for the morning lecture, although the majority of them have breakfasted an hour ago. Since most of the men live quite close to the University, it cannot be pleaded in defence that the time was consumed in making their way thither. No, it simply has been lost, it has gone without any result to be shown. After the first lectures, suppose our average student has an hour off. How does he use it? He spends ten minutes debating with himself and some of his classmates as to what they shall do. When they have decided to go to the library and prepare the subject of their next lecture, another the War. five minutes are necessary for them to get on their coats and hats and collect sundry books. Then they sally forth, arrive at the library, and, having divested themselves of their outdoor raiment, prepare to study. But first ten minutes are devoted to "settling down''; books of reference and dictionaries have to be removed the War. from the shelves; the inevitable glances have to be cast at the tables occupied by the other students. In short, by the time the student is ready to begin work, he finds that three-quarters of his precious hour is gone; of the remaining fifteen minutes, five must be allowed for returning to the faculty building, so that just ten minutes are nificent. left for the task to be prepared.

As we have supposed our student to be an average one, it is almost certain that he will give up the vain attempt in disgust and the Russian People. return forthwith to take his lecture without any preparation. Even Army Before Napoleon. if he does make a desperate effort, the time is altogether too short for it to be of any avail.

This may seem to be an exaggeration, but it is a real fact that amity. time and again students enter the library at about a quarter to the hour, spend about five minutes in "settling down," and then have land. to make their exit with nothing accomplished. Surely here is a chance for us to exercise a little economy of time. The hours between lectures can be made just as useful, in their way, as the lectures themselves, if they are employed rightly. It is in this way logue of Exhibition of Shakespearithat students waste their hours as a rule, rather than in an over- ana. attention to social activities.

PROGRESS.

The head of one of the large departments of the University has consciously or unconsciously, adopted for his own use a practice now in use by one of the greatest business firms of the nation. The practice is simple enough: it involves merely one ten-minute conference some time during the course of the semester with each man in this professor's class. Each day two men have a conference with the professor. He himself gives up twenty minutes a day. The individual student gives up but ten minutes a semester.

The object of these conferences is simply a better understanding between instructor and pupil. By this is meant not so much a more intimate relation, a relation of closer friendship; but, rather, on the part of the instructor, a better understanding of the students' needs, and, on the part of the student, a clearer understanding of the instructor's point of view and the general purpose of the course. Intimacy, as "The Maroon" understands the matter, is not the object-it is incidental. In itself it is a good thing and undoubtedly its benefits are among the most important resulting from the conferences-but nevertheless, good-fellowship is not the main object. The conferences are a business affair, designed for the greater efficiency of the instruction.

The conferences have not yet had either a fair or long trial. But, at the risk of being considered premature, "The Maroon" as a student organ, indorses as strongly as it can this new phase of student-faculty relations. The introduction of the conferences into their single but large department should not stop there. It should be extended in systematic fashion to most of the other de- en a motion was proposed by Mr. partments of the institution, especially those dealing largely with Tannerbill, and seconded by Mr. under-classmen. Untold benefits, "The Maroon" believes, could ered to make the application, and to result from an organized study of the special needs of the individ- seek to bring the matter to a head ual student. Tobacco

Tobacco requires a large amount of care throughout its growth. Constant shallow cultivation is practised after the tobacco plants are set out until they have reached a size where further cultivation would damage the leaves and injure the roots. The plant, in its cultivation would damage the leaves and injure the roots. The plant, in its early stages is liable to injury from the attacks of the tobacco-worm and other parasites which commit great devastation in the crops. To prevent the leading stem from running up too quickly to flower and seed, and so starving the leaves, the top is nipped off with the thumb nail, leaving only nine or twelve leaves on each stem. Later on the suckers or shoots which now make their appearance at the junction of the leaves and about the roots of the plants, are removed. Tobacco is also subject to "firing," a kind of blight causing much injury to the crops. The planter must, therefore, protect his crop against all these possible injuries by proper spraying and cultivating. All of these different operations take time and cost money, but the increased price which the planter receives for his crop warrants the expenditure and care. Nothing but tobacco cultivated as above enters into the making of

"Get Up to the Net"

It's not easy. Not after the first couple of sets anyway. Past this point getting up to the net becomes down right hard work, requiring every ounce of strength and stamina in your body. And some times when this fails you just can't get up to the net and are forced into a defensive game.

Shredded Wheat

can't get people up to the net. It is not a miracle worker, but it can and has done its part in putting players in condition to see the game through, which is the most important consideration after all. Shredded Wheat is a musclebuilding, delicious, all-day food made from the whole wheat berry. It contains the maximum of food value and the minimum of waste. It is extremely easy to digest and nutritious to a high degree. It is a good, satisfying cereal food, which is about all that one should demand. MADE IN CANADA BY
